Thomas Chew

Born in 1861 at Manchester, England, he was the son of English cotton textile workers. When he was eight years old he worked part time in the Aberdeen Mills and attended school the other half. He came to the United States with his mother, landing at Fall River, Massachusetts, where he was met by his father who had preceded them to America.

He Found Employment as a weaver and as janitor of the Fall River T.C.C.A., as a part-time basis. He became superintendent of the Fall River Boys' Club in 1900. Later he secured community funds for the first building designed exclusively for boys' Club purposes. A second building for use of senior boys was built in 1907.

He was Treasurer and a charter member of the General Alliance of Workers with Boys (1906). He was a founder of the Federated Boys' Club (1906). He served as associate editor of "Work With Boys" for many years.

He was the Second President of the Boys' Club Federation, following Joseph A. Pitt. Later he became honorary vice-president of Boys' Clubs of America and was presented the gold medal for forty years of distinguished service by the Honorable Herbert Hoover, Chairman of the board of directors.

He was a Modest Man with a warm and friendly personality. He was a religious man who served as deacon of his church, although he had a very limited formal education, he was an avid reader of religious, sociological and philosophical writings. While largely self educated, he proved to be extremely successful as a teacher, a leader and an advocate for boys and young men.

He was a Keen Observer possessing wide knowledge and deep understanding of youth, especially of the problems and needs of boys. "You can't live to build boys a thousand boys, to rear, to shape, a thousand boys and boys on," long thousands of boys did meet Thomas Chew and a countless number of them were inspired and helped by his warm rough spots along the way.

He was a Great Crusader. A paraphrase of a statement by Mr. Chew is that to live is to heal the weakness of the past, to present is a direct admission of the present. To him, the words, he said, "To work under that power is to accept God's call to fight, to work, to live, and if need be, to die for it."

He was an Inspired Pioneer, an energetic promoter, and a founder of organizations for work with boys. He realized the great need for such organizations and gave liberally of his time and strength to assist in their promotion and development.

We Commend and Praise the services of Thomas Chew, a great humanitarian, and we hold him as a dynamic leader of the Boys' Club movement. In virtue of the authority vested in the Executive Committee, we nominate and declare him elected to
